

Rosemary Reynolds

Reynolds Public Safety Communications, LLC
Owner

Rosemary Reynolds has been an Award-winning Pacific Northwest Broadcast Journalist for more than 30 years. As a Radio Reporter she brought volumes of expertise in journalism covering Police, Fire and the Courts. Known by her peers as a dedicated, hardworking, and ethical journalist, led her to top leadership positions such as News Director, Public Affairs Director, Anchor and Investigative Reporter. Rosemary's talent and determination earned her two Regional and one National Award from the Society of Professional Journalists, three Associated Press and seven Oregon Association of Broadcasting Awards. Rosemary's experience also expands into the field of education. She co-owned and operated a Radio Broadcasting school In Tigard, Oregon for 14 years working alongside her husband. Portland Community College and Mt. Hood Community College hired her to teach writing for Broadcast Journalism Courses. Today, Rosemary is the owner of Reynolds Public Safety Communications, LLC. She is a voice and imaging talent, freelance writer, guest speaker, motivational speaker and mistress of ceremonies. 'Trapped In The System' is the result of a true crime story she covered for years as a reporter. Rosemary is passionate about her family, gardening, photography and anything having to do with exploring the great outdoors. She lives in Portland, Oregon.

Topic: "Justice Delayed: The Story of Chief Ralph Painter and the Struggle for Change"