Code Four Founder

George Cheng is the founder of Code Four, an AI company focused on accelerating police report writing and investigative workflows. He studied Computer Science/AI at MIT and has been close to public safety work throughout his life as the son of two school resource officers. An Eagle Scout who began publishing computer vision research for the Department of Defense at 17, George now focuses on how responsible AI can help law enforcement solve cases and reduce paperwork without compromising trust or privacy.
